Fallout Shelters Can Save Millions of Americans

Many Americans near the points of bomb impact could be killed in a nuclear attack by blast, heat and initial radiation.

But millions could survive by the simple expedient of protecting themselves against radioactive fallout.

• • •

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER has called fallout shelters "the best single defense measure for the protection of the greatest number of our people."

For about $25 to $150 per person, families can construct shelters, on a do-it-yourself basis, into which they can go after any nuclear attack to stay alive until radiation intensity outside lessens to safe levels, civil defense authorities point out.

Any shelter must be equipped with the necessities of life, including food, water, first aid and sanitary supplies and lights. There must be enough for all shelter occupants for at least 14 days.

Two pamphlets are available to help you construct a suitable basement or underground shelter. One is MP-15, "The Family Fallout Shelter," which details five basic designs of concrete block, reinforced concrete and prefabricated metal. The other, MP-18, "Clay Masonry Fallout Shelters," shows five other plans for basic shelters, calling for use of clay products (brick or tile).

• • •

THESE PAMPHLETS can be obtained from your local or State civil defense offices, or by writing to Box Home Shelter, Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization, Battle Creek, Mich.

Many persons building shelters are setting them up as recreation rooms, dens, or extra bedroom space, thus gaining multiple use of the facilities, civil defense officials report.

OCDM encourages multi-purpose use of shelter space. Its prime concern is that such radiation-proof shelter be provided now, officials say. On the day of any attack, such efforts would be too little and too late.

INDUSTRIAL DEFENSE exercise conducted by the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. in one of its Pittsburgh plants featured evacuation to shelters of all 2,000 employes in a well-rehearsed routine. The firm, like some other large companies, has a well-developed emergency plan including shelters, first aid training, a relocation site agency plan including shelters, first aid training, a relocation site for management and vital records, and fire-fighting. Shown inspecting the plant during the exercise is Leo A. Hoegh (left), director of the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization, and Dr. Richard Gerstell, Pennsylvania Civil Defense director. WASHINGTON, D.C. — The American Legion joined with a segment of the nation's independent druggists today to launch a get-out-the-vote campaign for the 1960 elections. Plans for throwing 17,000 Legion posts and 10,000 drug stores, affiliated with the Rexall Drug Co., into the campaign were announced at a luncheon. Each drug store will serve as an information center on voting. Shown examining one of the ballot boxes that will appear in Rexall Drug Stores are, left to right: Sen. Thruston Morton (R. Ky.), GOP National Chairman; John Bowles, chairman, Drug Industry Participation, American Heritage Foundation; George N. Craig, former National Commander of the American Legion; and Sen. A. S. "Mike" Monroney (D. Okla.).

One of the largest groups of historians ever to visit Appomattox will be here tomorrow for a tour of the National Park Service area. In the group will be approximately 70 members of the Chicago, Ill., Civil War Round Table, oldest and one of the largest groups specializing in the history of the Civil War.

The Chicago Civil War Round Table group is on a tour of famous battlefields and shrines in this area. Traveling by chartered buses, they will leave Richmond tomorrow and follow the famous line of Lee's Retreat, reaching Appomattox shortly after noon.

H. A. Gurney, local National Park Service Superintendent, and Jim Haskett, Park Historian, will greet the distinguished guests and show them over the Appomattox Peace Shrine.

From Appomattox, the group will proceed to Monticello.

U. S. 'ALERT' TO FEATURE CONELRAD DRILL, CLOSE GOVERNMENT INTERPLAY

May 3, 4, and 5 are important days this year to all Americans. On these days the seventh annual civil defense preparedness exercise, Operation Alert 1960, will be held from coast to coast.

The objective of the 1960 Alert will be to train personnel in National, State, and local governments, in industry, and in private organizations to respond effectively to an all-out attack on the United States with nuclear weapons.

• • •

THE PRINCIPAL participation by the public on a nationwide basis in the exercise will be during the half-hour beginning at 1 p.m. (EST) on Tuesday, May 3, when a Conelrad radio broadcast will be aired on 640 and 1240 kilocycles. During this period, all television, FM radio stations, and those radio stations not in the Conelrad network must leave the air.

The special Conelrad broadcast will originate from the Emergency Site of the Federal Government "somewhere outside of Washington." It will include brief addresses by President Eisenhower and Civil and Defense Mobilization Director Leo A. Hoegh.

The Conelrad broadcast will give the American public an opportunity to experience the kind of radio reception it would have to rely on during an attack. The broadcast distance will be emphasized by the fact that, under actual conditions, the 640 and 1240 kc. frequencies would be the only survival instructions to the general public.

PARTICIPATION BY the Federal, State, and local governments this year will be of special significance to the nation's preparedness program for it will demonstrate the effectiveness of coordinated action among them.

Federal agencies will issue comprehensive plans for action during an attack on this country. All 50 States will operate under their statewide survival plans. Plans for emergency action in metropolitan areas and smaller communities will be screened for their effectiveness.

Equally important will be the conduct of the exercise in industrial plants throughout the country because emergency procedures in the larger plants are as comprehensive as those for an entire community. Mutual aid agreements within industry are another form of coordinated action.

How Can Crops Get A Better Start?

...archers put this question to state university and U.S.D.A. ...ists. Their answers, summarized below from a Massey-Ferguson report, may contain some pointers that could mean the difference between a high profit harvest and just an average return:

Select best variety seed for you. The best yielding seed for your farm may not be one of the most popular varieties, agricultural authorities said. For example, when Iowa scientists tested 90 corn hybrids, not one of the most popular varieties ranked in the top 10 on the basis of yield. A good rule: check official state yield tests and don't buy seed that originated more than 150 miles from you unless it is a certified variety recommended for your area.

Prepare seed bed properly. Authorities also report that the current trend is toward less tillage for all crops. Good results follow when corn and soybean ground is worked only enough to put seed in contact with moist soil. The test of a good seed bed is whether it will allow accurate planting. Combining operations will often make the seed bed too loose; one example of this is to pull a harrow behind the plow.

Make the right temperature. A good way to know when to plant is to check soil temperature at planting depth with a thermometer. Take a reading between 7 and 8 a.m. for three consecutive days. Ideal soil temperatures for corn is about 60°F.; soybeans, cotton, 68°F.; and grain sorghum, 70°F.

Place fertilizer for best pay. Tests show that today's high-analysis fertilizers and rapid planting seeds do best when fertilizer is placed 2 inches below and 2 inches to the side for corn, cotton, and other seeds. Side roots from young seedlings then reach the fertilizer shortly after germination, just when they need it most. Proper placement can be more important than proper amounts.

Plant thick stands. Scientists say that many farmers miss a bet when the planting rate is too thin for top yields. This is especially true of corn. Recommendations for 100 ba. of corn are about 16,000 kernels of late maturing, and 24,000 kernels for 80 or 90 day seed, except in dry areas where these rates can be trimmed slightly. For soybeans, use 20 to 45 lbs. of seed per acre for high germination. If soil crusts easily, then put up to 60 lbs. in the row. A four-row cotton planter should be set to deliver about 18 lbs. of seed per acre.

Researchers added that weather, of course, has much to do with yield but size of harvest for many crops is set the day the seed goes into the ground.

Family Favorites

Strawberry jam and hot buttered biscuits have been family favorites since the beginning of time—home canning time that is. But gone are the days when jam had to be boiled for hours, cooled and covered with paraffin.

The recipe on the box of biscuit mix points the way to light and flaky biscuits, and here is how you make luscious strawberry jam. It's quick and easy. Better hurry and get together the things you will need because strawberries are, or soon will be, red ripe and ready.

Strawberry Jam

4½ cups prepared berries — 1 box fruit pectin
7 cups sugar

Wash, drain, hull, crush and measure fully ripe berries. Put berries and pectin into a 4 to 6 quart kettle. Stir over high heat until mixture reaches a fast boil. Add sugar—keep stirring. Bring mixture to fast boil and let boil exactly one minute. Remove from heat; quickly skim off foam. Do not stir to cool. Pour boiling hot jam to within ½ inch of the top of half pint jars. You won't need paraffin because the Dome lid keeps the jar sealed airtight. Put lid on jar; screw band tight and invert jar. When all jars are filled and sealed, stand them upright to cool. If fruit goes to bottom of jar, wait about 20 minutes and then shake jar to redistribute fruit through sirup.

Household Decorating

Walls, windows and floors are the background for your decorating. They are as important as furniture; perhaps more important. Walls and windows create the type atmosphere you want. Their height, statelines and fornfality, or quaintness and informality, set the theme of a room.

Smaller houses and smaller rooms demand that we make our walls work for us by holding the added conveniences of built-in furniture, shallow closets, drop-leaf desks and the like.

Scenic wallpapers, or those in scenic effect, are among the most beautiful and formal of wall decorations. They were used first to replace mural decorations and have gradually become a definite type.

Floral wallpapers in delicate colors are lively in bedrooms. The light, airy prints are particularly lovely for a young girl's room.

Painted walls of a solod color in varying tones from light to putty cream, rosefi and blue are used as backgrounds. Pictured rugs and draperies give pattern to this room.

Paneling is popular in an informal room, and even for modern kitchens. Jacobean paneling of oak or mahogany is beautiful for the more formal homes. In such rooms draperies may be a rich damask in yellow or red or a hand-blocked Jacobean figure. Oriental rugs and needlepoint coverings for furniture will complete a picture of elegance.

Those who seek to improve their minds will be the leaders of tomorrow.
